

ProQuest* Electronic Database
Most popular and frequently used database at NWC!
Search ProQuest for journal and magazine articles.

ProQuest is a social science database of over 4,500 titles relating to the military, news, politics, and government. More than half of the indexed titles are available in full-text format. Print, download, and email options are available.

The database includes articles from more than 100 military magazines such as U.S. Naval Institute Proceedings, Naval War College Review, Marine Corps Gazette, Parameters, Air & Space Power Journal, and Joint Force Quarterly and from over 500 journals and newsletters with relevance to defense and international issues. Among those periodicals are Foreign Affairs, Foreign Policy, and NATO's Nations and Partners for Peace.

Note: The default setting allows for searching a subset of the database that includes approximately 600 titles in the Military Module and the Military Collection. Click Select Multiple Databases and follow screen directions if you wish to change the default setting to search the entire database.

Other ProQuest databases are also available:

- ProQuest Historical Newspapers, a 19th to early 20th century newspaper database, is an index to full-text articles from four major newspapers. The database offers full page and article images with searchable text going back to each newspaper's first issue.

New York Times (1851--2001)
Christian Science Monitor (1908--1991)
Wall Street Journal (1889--1987)
Washington Post (1877--1988)

Note: Search Lexis-Nexis Academic for current newspaper articles.

- ProQuest Reference Asia highlights the countries, regions, economies, institutions, peoples, policies, and political processes of Asia. Contents of the database include frequently updated full-text news coverage, national and regional statistics, biographical information, working papers, reports, policy papers, and statements from national governments, NGOs, IGOs, academic institutes and commercial sources, and, include, in addition, links to the Web sites of the region's major organizations.

Give ProQuest a try.
